International Institute of Business Analysis announces “gold standard” professional certification exam is now available in German

(Germany, November 1, 2013) International Institute of Business Analysis (IIBA), in partnership with the European Association of Business Analysis (EABA), is pleased to announce the Certified Business Analysis Professional™ (CBAP®) exam is now available in German.

Candidates for the CBAP® certification must submit an application and fees to register for the exam. The certification program has been carefully designed to be in compliance with the ISO 17024 standard for certifying the competence of personnel.

Dave Bieg, Chief Operating Officer and Treasurer, IIBA says, “IIBA® is pleased to be partnering with EABA to offer German language certification exams in Austria, Germany and Switzerland, as well as anywhere a German speaking business analysis practitioner requires it. EABA has worked very hard to translate the IIBA BABOK® Guide, as well as certification exams, to make this new IIBA offering possible.”

Martin Pfaendler, Vice Chairman, EABA says, “The business analysis profession has evolved in the English speaking world and gained formalization and recognition thanks to the creation and activities of IIBA. It is becoming increasingly important and recognized in other parts of the world including, of course, in German-speaking Europe. In this part of the business world, EABA and its national sponsor organizations are well positioned to help this profession gain recognition. We are pleased to partner with IIBA and undertake the journey to achieve common goals.”

Candidates for the CBAP® certification must meet a strict set of criteria, including a minimum of 7500 hours of business analysis experience in the last 10 years that aligns with A Guide to the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge® (BABOK® Guide). Visit www.IIBA.org for full details.
